Norwich High School Senior Selected Experiential Learner of the Month

KEUKA PARK, N.Y.—Norwich resident Sabrina Diehl, a senior at Norwich High School, is the December recipient of Keuka College's Experiential Learner of the Month Award.

Keuka, the national leader in experiential, hands-on learning, established the program to honor high school students whose commitment to experiential, hands-on learning has made a difference in their communities.

Diehl will receive a partial fellowship to Keuka and qualify for the Experiential Learner of the Year Award, which carries a full fellowship to the College.

Diehl was nominated for the award by Tracy Maynard, a guidance counselor at Norwich High School.

"Sabrina is an outstanding student who values her education and takes her studies seriously," said Maynard. "She always goes beyond what is expected."

Diehl is enrolled in the school's New Visions program, which "allows her to not only challenge herself academically but to also gain hands-on experience in the world of work," said Maynard, who added that Diehl is "a well-rounded individual who serves as an outstanding role model.

"Sabrina is well respected among both faculty and her peers. Overall, she is a wonderful young lady who works part-time, excels academically, takes part in extracurricular activities, and still finds time to be an exemplary citizen."

President of Key Club, Diehl is responsible for many of the volunteer activities that take place within her community.
